

AMATEUR SINNER PUTTING REGULAR OUT OF BUSINESS

London Police Head Draws
Conclusion After Years of Observation.

LONDON, June 15.—(T.) Woman who sins because she is driven to it for a living or because she prefers it to honest work is being driven out of business by the amateur," declared Sir Leonard Dunning, H. M. Inspector of Constabulary.

Sir Leonard, whose police duties have given him long experience with the seamy side of London life, is not at all satisfied with the modern woman.

Amateur women sinners are becoming a menace, according to Sir Leonard, who declares that the amateur "sins in order that, while preserving an outward reputation, she may indulge her cravings for what would otherwise be out of her reach."

This is attributed to the decay of parental influence, by Sir Leonard.

Supporting the views of Sir Leonard is Mrs. E. F. Smith, a well known woman magistrate in Brighton, one of England's resorts, a woman who has been regarded as a leader of her sex in Great Britain. "There are devastating forces at work undermining women's morality," Mrs. Smith said. "Foremost of these is the housing shortage, following the war, which has placed many young girls in a decidedly unhealthy atmosphere."

"In Brighton there are hundreds of families, including girls at the perilous age of from 15 to 18, crowded into one or two rooms."

Consequences Obvious.

"The consequences of this herding together of the sexes, at a time when a girl feels the first impulse of womanhood is obvious. Modesty is thrust aside by overwhelming circumstances and the loss of this first virtue in a woman is but a step from immorality."

"Men are still affected by the aftermath of war passions, and in consequence the temptations of unemployed girls are appalling."

"There is no doubt the amateur sinner between 15 and 20 years of age is predominant in Brighton. But is that surprising? No girl can walk along the front without being molested, accosted, or spoken to by men."

"When any girl living under the conditions I have described is offered a bright evening at a theater, a dance, followed by a good meal, she finds the opportunity very alluring. Then, when virtue has been forfeited, the amateur easily becomes the hardened sinner."

"This terrible state of affairs, which imperils the life of the nation, will undoubtedly grow worse, by sheer force of circumstances, unless drastic measures are taken."

FOR FALL.

Plain and brocaded velvets and tulle cloths will be the leading fabrics for fall gowns. Beaded velvet will be used extensively.

Data Via Sign Board

It is believed that 20,000 people will be reached daily by messages to be shown on a huge signboard now being erected on the southeast corner of the court house lawn under the direction of the South Bend expansion group. The various messages will be in the interest of home building in the city and will serve as a part of a wide educational campaign being planned by Mayor Seibert and his committee to impress the need for additional houses in South Bend.

Permission for the erection of the board was granted by the county board of commissioners following a petition on the part of Mayor Seibert and his committee. The first message will be placed on the board within the next few days by the Thomas Cusack company. New messages will be posted from time to time as the housing expansion work progresses.

LONG JAIL STAY MAY AWAIT WOMAN SUSPECT

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., June 15.—Mrs. Doris Brunen, under arrest here charged with complicity in the murder of her husband "Honest John" Brunen, the circus owner, probably will have to remain in her cell in the Burlington county jail until next fall before a grand jury will be called. Prosecutor Kelsey said Wednesday night.

Although County Detective Parker asserted he still was seeking two other women, one whose name he claimed to have and another known as "the girl with the auburn hair," Prosecutor Kelsey said he expected to make no more arrests at present.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You
Darken Gray, Faded Hair
With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears after another application or two. It is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. —Adv.

Tale of Modern Pirates

By WILFRID FLEISHER.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

MAITHEILLES, France, June 10.—A modern pirate story, upon its last chapter in the courts here July 7, when eight Russians claiming to be communists and enemies of society will be arraigned on charges of plundering and dismantling the French steamship "Squirah" in the Black Sea, on the night of May 6, 1920.

The "Squirah" was on her way from Batoum to Trebizond when a gang of 20 men who had taken passage aboard her, held up the crew at the point of the revolver, robbed the passengers and ransacked the ship. They dismantled the wireless and finally forced the engineer to steer for shore where they made good their escape.

It was 8 o'clock in the evening and the "Squirah" was three hours out of Batoum and in midsea when two men leapt onto the bridge revolver in hand and held up the navigating officer and first officer. The latter shouted for help but when the captain arrived he found himself face to face with two other bandits, revolvers leveled.

Simultaneously two more bandits made for the wireless cabin where the operator had locked himself in. They held-up men forced the door, dismantled the wireless and threw the batteries overboard.

The chief engineer, armed with a rifle, tried to reach the captain for orders but a volley from the bandits made it evident that it was impossible, while the noise from the shots spread panic among the passengers who ran frantically about the decks.

Out of touch with one another, the ship's officers were unable to direct the course of the boat and the captain was forced under threat of death to steer the ship according to the dictates of the holdup men.

While six men held the crew, others ransacked the cabin opening everything, slitting trunks and handbags with knives. The plunderers then piled all the loot into sacks. At midnight after four hours' ransacking the holdup men announced that their task was completed.

The boat was then of Keppa where, according to the plans of the holdup men, a motor boat was to meet them and take them ashore. But there being no motor boat in sight, the chief of the gang ordered the captain to lower the life boats and row them ashore with their booty.

The captain refused to leave his ship, but the remaining officers were obliged to carry out the bandits' orders. Once ashore the bandits disappeared in the thick of a forest where they proceeded to divide the spoils. Each received 200,000 roubles as his share, the division of the remaining spoils was left to the following day.

The gang then parted, eight of them making for the village of Treiss where they encountered a detachment of Turkish volunteers and were arrested. These are the eight men who appear in court today.
